CHILD HURT ON TURN TABLE

Defendant Held Responsible on Negelect to Take Proper Precautions -$15,000 Asked.

Unusual grounds on which plaintiff desires to recover damages are cited in a complaint brought here on change of venue from Clay County Wednesday. The suit is that of Leo Russell Gilmour, by his next friend Elizabeth Gilmour vs. The Central Indiana Railway Company. DePAUW TAKES CONTEST WITH EASE ON MCKEEN FIELD YESTERDAY

LEAN ON THE BALL HARD

DePauw won the classiest game of the season from Wabash Tuesday by a score of 5 to 2.

The contest was warm throughout with numerous hot spots that kept the fans excited.

DePauw outplayed the visitors in batteries, fielding, and timely hits. Dates Set For a Number of the The fielding, considering the heavy field, showed the whole team to be working like a machine in this part of the game.

Only six men faced "Hop" the first two innings. To start things, with Adams and Bryant on base, he slammed out a hard one to the fence good for two, that scored Adams. Bryant came in on a long drive to deep left by Collins.

The second innning saw things. Tucker started the ball rolling by beating out an easy one. Al fonte was given milage, then Adams, the mighty south paw, swung full on the pill and lifted it high over the right leld fence. His home run brought in two more and that was enough for one inning.

Two clever double plays were oulled off in the third, the first when little Tucker nabbed a warm one out of the atmosphere tagged the runner, and threw the man out

It remained for the "Little Iron Man" to save he game from the wonderful rally of Wabash in the sixth. OF HOLDING HANDS

COUNTY OFFICIALS DO NOT FEEL FREE TO ACT ON COM-PLAINT OF COMMITTEE

GUSTOM IN VOGUE IN PUTNAM

A committee who claimed to be representing the ladies of Greencastle appeared before the board of county commissioners Monday afternoon and registered a kick against what they called certain conditions at the courthouse. They stated that they entered the courthouse, to find in the vestibules several couples of young people courting and holding hands; that they did not object to the courting in the courthouse, but when it came to holding hands in public, they thought it was time that the commissioners have the janitor to "take a hand" or in other words, to put a stop it

It is understood that the president of the board stated that in his section of the county it was a common custom for lovers to hold hands; that he did it when he was a boy and that he could see the practice in vogue at this time, and he therefore did not feel that it was duty to instruct the janitor to interfere. The member from the southwest section of the county is reported as stating that the custom was being practiced in his section of the county and that when he was a boy, the young people often attended church, singing school and other gatherings, sitting throughout the service, holding hands, and when the services were over they walked to their homes, hand in hand, and swinging their hands between them as they walked happily along the

The member from Russell Town ship stated that the custom had not vet reached his section of the county, but that he expected it to be there in due time, at which time he The result is that for the time at least, courting in the courthouse and continue to be tolerated by the officials, so long as the habit is kept within the bounds of the custom The Beechwood Peasant Circle practiced in the section of the county wherein reside the president and his colleague, and which is expected in due time to reach the domain of the gentleman from Russell Township.

RALPH MOSS. In nominating for a second term in the House of Representatives, the Hon. Ralph W. Moss the Democrats of the Fifth District showed that they know a good man when they find one. Mr. Moss has been an entire success in his position. He has been more closely in touch with his constituency than any other congressman from the state and prob ably from any other state. Mr. Moss believed thoroughly that it was the right of the people who elected him to know what he and his colleagues were doing, and he therefore wrote frequent letters to the papers of the district telling in plain words of the situation at Washington as seen from behind the scenes. Many a voter in the district has a clearer view of the ways of the men and the parties at Washington than ever before since reading the Moss letters. SURGICAL PROGRESS

Except Sunday by the Star and Demo- Dr. Keen Shows What Vivisection Has Done to Adance It.

> Dr. W. W. Keen, writing in the current number of Harper's Magazine on the subject, "Recent Surgical Progress," says, among other things:

"The most recent researches in the surgery of the heart are efforts to determine whether it is possible not only to expose the heart and operate on its exterior, but deliberately to open its cavities and operate on the valves. The results so far seen show that it is no dream of a surgical Utopia, but that before long 'valvular disease of the heart,' hitherto an absolutely incurable disease, may be dealt with surgically and with the possibility of success. "Three years ago I saw Dr. Crile, of Cleveland, chloroform a dog to death. By a suitable apparatus he was able accurately to record the very last pulsation of the heart and the last attempt at breathing. I stood by the dog, watch in hand, and when he had been dead-having neither pulsation of the heart nor breathing-for fifteen minutes, Dr. Crile injected toward the heart in the carotid artery a mixture of salt solution and adrenalin (an extract of a gland lying just above the kidney', compressed the dog's chest a few times, thus starting the heart and lungs going, and in less than three minutes the dog, though of course, still unconscious from the anaesthetic, was fust as much alive as he had been a half hour before. Partial but not permanent recovery has been obtained by Dr. Crile in animals even twenty-five minutes after actual death. If further experience confirms these results, we may have a better method of resuscitation than exposing the heart as above related.

"From the heart naturally we pass to the arteries, which conduct the blood from the heart to all parts of the body. Wounds of the arteries by gunshot, by stabs, by accidents, etc., are not at all uncommon. Until very lately, when a large artery or a large vein was wounded, our only remedy was to cut down upon the blood vessel and tie it above and below the wound. If it were an artery leading to the arm, and still more of it were one leading to the leg, as the principal supply of blood was cut off, gangrene was a very common result.

'In case of aneurism, a disease in which the walls of the artery become weakened at a certain point, bulge and finally rupture, producing death, till recently, as in the case of a wound, our only resource was to cut down upon the artery and tie it. Here | ication, by chain, cord, or other deagain the chief danger was gangrene. In the treatment of aneurism, Dr. Matas, of New Orleans, has made the greatest improvement from the days Instead of tying the artery above the aneurism and arresting the current so describe it, sews the wall of the sac together on its inside, leaving however, a small tunnel through a full share of attention. The mos which the circulation is continued.

"I am old enough perhaps without reproach to relate the following personal incident: While writing this paper a friend gave me the Journal of Zoophily for January, 1909. On page 2 I found in an editorial note on a large gift by its founder to the Rockefeller Institute the following: But the gift only fanned into fury the opposition of women to experiments on living animals, no matter how great the anticipated benefit.' Three days later, between noon and bedtime, I happened to meet four former patients, all of whom thanked me warmly for having saved their lives. Three of these four patients owed their lives chiefly to the knowledge derived from experiments upon animals. No further comment need be made on these cruel words-'no matter how great the anticipated benefit. With a thrill or delight I fervently thanked God for what modern

"Freak" Patents.

Sir C. N. Dalton, who has just retired from the Comptrollership of the Patent Office, during his eleven years of office, had had to brave the inportunities of hor's of freak inventors, but on giving up the reins he has the satisfaction of knowing that the "crank" is becoming a negligible quantity, while the man of sterling worth has found, by recent enactments, a greater scope for the excrcise of his inventive faculties.

Among the curic ities to which the present generation has given birth is a specification for combining animal instinct with human precision in the realm of sport. The patentee elabor ated a plan whereby "direct communvice, should be established between the tail of a pointer and the trigger of the sportsman's gun." By intrition the dog would know when the bird would rise, and by moving his tail would fire the gun. The sportman had only to see that his aim was accurate; the dog and the bird would

All great crises have stimulated the creative faculty of mankind, and earthquakes have, of course, earned original notion in this connection was put forth by a genius who quite satisfied himself that if houses were provided with wheels or rollers they would move about backwards or forwards during an earthquake and escape disaster.

Another aspirant for fame bemoaned the unhappy circumstance that man was unable to vie with the fly in rambles on the ceilings, and he patented an arrangement for soling boots with iron, so that, in combination with an electro-magnetic ceiling, he would be able to walk head downwards. Besides the instances quoted, there are thousands of others which evidence a mental twist. They help to leaven the dull recording of fact in the form of specification, but it is with the serious side of the work of the Patent Office that Sir Cornelius Dalton's reign has been made notable.

In 1902 an act was passed requiring an official investigation to be made for the purpose of ascertaining whether inventions sought to be patented had been in whole or part claimed or described in the specifications for fifty years back. It is significant, as showing how the world moves in grooves, that in the first year the examiners found that 60 per cent of the claims had been either partly or wholly anticipated.

In 1907 the Comptroller went a ster further by getting authority to refuse the grant of a patent if he were satisfied that the invention claimed had been wholly and specifically asked for in any specification to which the official investigation as to prior patenting had been extended. In 1905 the Office was still further strengthened by separating the Trade Marks Law from the Patent and Designs Law, which two years later the latter act was codified and considerably improved. .

During the year 1897-famous for the great cycle boom-more patents were taken out than during any twelve months on "ecord. The figures for the past year evidence a renewed activity, and since January last the applications have been so consistenly numerous that he present year promises to establish a new record at the Patent Office.—London Mail.

There is no one standard to No one specialist sets a pace or manufacturers to follow, not even in size. The models shown in a store which keeps an enormous stock of untrimmed hats will include perhaps ome which can't be duplicated in other stores keeping in stock an equaly enormous variety. A few of the lost extremely styles are originated n New York. More of them are born in France, and there is a proportion designed abroad and then modified by American designers, if they can be called that, including as they do buyers, managers, proprietors of factories most of whom are men.

One estimate is that nine-tenths of the women's straw hats used in America are of home manufacture, the finest of these being made right in New York, where at a conservative estimate there are about twenty factories. Not so very long ago one or two of the New England States had almost a monopoly of the scraw hat business; then one or two of the Western States took up the industry. These factories were added to by numberless smaller factories, led by those in this city, several of which make only the cheaper grades which retail for less than $1. In one of the Broadway fancy goods stores which makes a specialty of fine millinery there isn't a straw hat on the premises marked less than $1.75. From this the prices mount up to $12 each, the latter made of fine horsehair, representing the highest grade of work and the most wonderful models. Every hat sold in that store was made in New York at the private factory of the concern. This of course does not mean that all the models made there were designed on this side of the water. There isn't a factory in New York of which that can be said. The Broadway store sends a man over four times a year to look over the French models-the most exclusive he can get at, as well as those planned more particularly for the trade. This man picks models and stores away mental pictures of shapes he sees at private milliners' and of models he sees worn by conspicuously fashionable women When he gets back he proceeds to create a few original shapes on his own account. From the latter and the models he has brought over, which are also frequenty changed a little, the hat blocks are made and sent to the factory and the ing his head mournfully, he mumbled

One manufacturer in accounting for some of the extrer models said that in some cases they and been made for certain very beautiful women, among whom were several actresses, who had a liking for pronounced novelties and paid well to have exclusive things made for them at private establish-than any other one person, and yet she does not sell to the trade at all, her clientele being strictly of the fashionable class. Her models are seen and copied with more or less success by manufacturers who in turn sell to wholesale buyers from all over the world

"I have been told that when her special customers put in an appearance Mme. - shuts herself up with wire, buckram, straw braid and other things and proceeds to create some thing more or less daring which only a very beautiful woman can wear with stiff canvass supported with wire is success. Instead of a regulation block used to model the straw braid over. This is how every designer by the way, goes to work in any factory or shop. We do it here, the block being a copy of the buckram model.

"In Mme. -'s case, one hat of a kind only is made perhaps. Worn by the beautiful woman it creates something of a sensation and soon becomes the fashion, although the average woman will probably look like the dickens in it. This will account for some of the daring models. In more cases the originator of the higher priced designs shown in the New York stores is a man connected with the factories where they are made. A manufacture in running his eye over the sample brought from the other side will pick up a hat, call a head woman perhaps and say, 'Look here, I want a shape made to dent in here, to have the brim turn up there, to have a wider projection in the back, to have a crown two inches higher, and so on.' These new shapes give distinction to his output, and diversity too, even though they may not be any more becoming than the shape which suggested the changes.' Nowadays putting the hats together s almost exclusively women's work would not be easy to find a man straw sewer, but outside of this work men make far more money out of the business. Almost every sort of straw represented in hats is imported, and for the most part it comes over in the natural colors. In the average factory the straws are dved before being made up into hats, and this work from star to finish is done by men. Men also do most of the work in the pressing com, where hand and hydraulic ma hines of American make finish up the hats after they have been sewn or machines, the best of which make an invisible stitch not unlike hand sew ing at the rate of 3,000 to the minute Only operators of experience are in trusted with this fine sewing. Each with a reel of strw in her lap and the hat block in front of her which she is to copy must ke p a keen eye open for any irregularities in the straw any enevennesses in the lines as the hat crown or the hat brim grows. The experts, most of whom are Austrians and Germans, earn from $18 to $25 week, and they have about six month work in a year. Operators on coarset cheaper hats requiring less skill in handling earn perhaps half as much.

Because of the liking of fashionable vomen to match their hats to their costumes some New York manufact urers instead of dyeing large quantities of straw a certain uncommon shade turn out only a limited number ing done after the sewing.

Dyeing in the modern shades is at the best a considerable expense. It was comparatively easy sailing when black, brown, white and yellow straw hats formed the staple of trade. I takes skill and money to copy faithfully nature's coloring-the whole family of greens, lilacs, rainbow pinks, blues and yellow, to say nothing of the many reds and the countless variations of all of those shown in silks, velvets and chiffons, all of which are now demanded in hats. To make hats in which plain straw is combined with rims and insertions of fancy straw, to make hats with a brim of straw and a crown of something else requires more and a greater variety of workmen; and to manufacture sixty instead of six shape of the same material is less economic cal, for the reason that one or more of the sixty is likely to turn out a loser.-New York Sun.

Not a Success. The manager of the subscriptionbook department was telling of some of his experiences. "The funniest case I remember," he said, "was that of an applicant for a job at book can vassing from whom I expected great things. He made a careful study of the literature we supplied him with and was very enthusiastic. Judge of my surprise when the first morning he went out, back he came and handed in his resignation.

"'But you should not be so easily discouraged," I told him. 'Few make a success at the start, and you ack nowledge that you went into only two places.'

"'Only two,' he said lugubriously One was a real estate agent, who persuaded me to sign a contract for two lots in Fizzlehurst, and the other was a tailor, 'ho sold me a sui of clothes I didn't want,' and, shak-

THE ANTIDOTE.

It was while a young physiciannow practising in the East End-was a "resident" at the Allegheny General hospital that a patrol rattled into the court and a policeman lifted out a shaking, scared, disheveled man and hurried, half carrying him, into the emergency ward, followed by a woman in hysteria who had crept down white-faced from the wagon. An orderly summoned the young physician.

"Quick, oh, quick, for Gott's sake, toctor!" sobbed the woman rushing toward him down the ward, her hands in a convulsive clasp. "Mine husbant he haf took two poddles of poison. Ach Gott, ach Gott, he will die!" and her tongue wandered away into incoherences.

The young physician looked toward the policeman as a rational source of information.

"That's right, doc," spoke the cop. "Here's th' bottles." He passed over from his hip pocket two small vials which the physician took and turned to the light to examine. Both bore flaming labels marked in big red letters "Poison.

White as the sheet he was lying on the suicide stared with big-eyed fear, all in a tremble and waiting almost without breathing for the twice deadly dose to grip and trottle his life.

After a hurried moment during which he sniffed the bothes and tasted the corks, the young physician

"Did he swallow what was in both these bottles?"

"Yes, toctor, yes. He said-" "Did you see him do it?"

The young physician stood the bottles on a table and as he did so the muscles of his face seemed to be sub ject to a nervous, twitching action he crossed his legs and asked of the woman, while his eyes suppressed emotion of some sort or other:
